BOARD MEMBER NOTES

When I was originally invited to go on the walk, I agreed to go. I wasn't terribly excited at first. I had heard bits and pieces of what it was about, but just didn't think it would be a big deal. Boy was I wrong! I was amazed! I heard from speakers who had some of the same problems I had and some that had been through things way bigger than anything I had experienced and they came through with a stronger faith. There was laughter, tears, soul searching, so many emotions I went through that weekend.

When I read the letters that so many friends and family had written, I was so touched. The whole weekend became an experience that I didn't want to end. There, I could focus on God without distractions. In the real world there are too many distractions and I sometimes lose sight of Him.

However, I feel that since my walk experience, I have been able to better cope with life and the ups and downs it brings.

My life the last few years has been a roller coaster. I had a career change that has changed me because I get to work with special needs children and hopefully make a difference in their lives. I have been faced with challenges that included stepping out of my comfort zone and doing things that I thought I never would do. The last year was one of my biggest challenges and so far, this year has been even more challenging, but God has shown me that He is in charge and His ways and plans are perfect even when we can't see it. We don't always know why He allows things to happen, but when we can't see His hand, we can trust His heart.

Proverbs 14:17

Short-tempered people do foolish things, and schemers are hated.

A man who is quick tempered will do foolish things because he refuses to use self-control. Getting angry is not the main problem. The problem lies deeper than the surface. The Bible says a lot about anger and it teaches us not to let the sun go down upon our wrath (Ephesians 4:26). That very same verse also says be angry and do not sin. There are definitely times in life where we are going to get angry, so anger in itself is not a sin. There is a such thing as righteous anger. Letting anger control you is the real problem. It's always wise to think before you respond. A man who is easily angered will react quickly and most likely do something that he later regrets. He ends up being hated by others. He also will not have many close friends because of the foolish things that he has done in his anger. Chances are you will have an opportunity to get angry today. I encourage you to utilize the fruit of the Spirit that is self-control and think before you react to any situation. Thinking may lead you to prayer and prayer leads you to the response God would have you to make!
